We're excited to introduce you to Midtown Reader, a general-subject, independent bookstore opening November 2016 in Tallahassee. Located in an historic neighborhood at the city's center, Midtown Reader aims to build a loyal community of patrons through a regular variety of literary events and related cultural programming.

From literary fiction, mysteries, poetry, and science fiction to young adult books, biographies and cookbooks, Midtown Reader will stock new books in all subject areas. We also intend to showcase Florida authors and books about Florida's political, social, and natural history. And we'll provide regular children's programming through our Kidtown Readers Club!

Midtown Reader also seeks strong relationships with Tallahassee's ever-growing writing scene, which includes institutions like Florida State University's Graduate Creative Writing Program, the nation's top HBCU, Florida A&M University, and one of the country's highest ranked community colleges, Tallahassee Community College, as well as local organizations like The Tallahassee Writers Association.

Our involvement with these nationally recognized yet deeply local organizations will ensure Midtown Reader becomes the destination for writers and book lovers alike in Florida's capitol.

This dedication to diverse cultural events, family fun, and good books will make Midtown Reader a welcoming literary space in Tallahassee where everyone can read, think, and share.
